The sum of the 7th powec is 3 85 ir e j j == a f a --sA A property connected with these sums, has suggested some ingenious methods of approximating to the greatest or least root pf an equation. For, it ww sa, idt if any rpqt be, greater than (foe rest, its powers will exceed the powers ofj any other root, ajid indeed of aiJ the. others tOgetpe, r, whp the power is high; and the nwtrp So. the. higher we advance. This is true, whether the root be positive or negative. And if that roqt he the fart whjph tb- equation bat, what i frere?aid 0$ the foots will hold concerning their rfcifirosqif, JJence JtavyTON infers, that the root of the sum of the $)--h powers will be greater than the greatest root of the equation, put. Jo high powers yriU make a pear approach to the correct value, JJe was a.ware of the exception which the admixture of imaginary roots might occasion, but seems to have overlooked the. possibility of two or more pqtaj roots exceeding the rest; in which case, whether they have, the sarnp or different signs, it would be requisite to divide the sum of the. powers by the rumber of such roots previous...
