George Moorman gave the greater pleasure to Christmas by the following - dated at New Orleans, December 25, 1846: S. A. Cunningham, Editor of the Veteran: If you see at any time anything I can do to aid you with the Veteran, and in preparing your issues from now on to the reunion, I will gladly assist you with any material or information Headquarters can furnish. The reunion being held at Nashville will bring the Veteran into greater prominence than heretofore, and whatever material or information I can furnish, will be given you cheerfully and promptly. To a business correspondence, Mr. B. F. Johnson, of Richmond, Va., adds the following patriotic words: Let us treat all with the largest hearted liberality. We have enough substantial things to be proud over without contending for little and unimportant things and without splitting hairs. I want to see the Veteran teach the broadest sort of patriotism. You are beginning to get a hold on the people now that will make your paper a blessing to every part of...
