The six years after her death, as stated by me, I think was a mistake. Probably was meant for Letitia or Sarah Ann. My father, Joshua Ledlie Dunlevy, and I (Force C. Dunlevy) drove over to Battle Ridge a few days ago and visited the old stone house built by Darbey Dunlevj, and found it in fine condition. The house is built of stone taken out of the hills near about, some immense ones being used. It is two full stories, of some five rooms and hall, with a room built on for kitchen, and with a large fine cellar. The cornerstone or mark is placed on the east gable, some thirty or thirty-five feet from the ground, and reads as follows: The old log barn still stands which was built by grandfather, also the same old log springhouse still stands and is in every-day use. I made photographs of the house, springhouse, etc. , and made a view of Uncle Patrick Dunlevys place, which is about a half-mile from the old stone house. The Darbey Dunlevj-place is now owned and inhabited by T. C. Campbell, the place being bought from the executors of Darbey Dunlevys estate by Mr. Campbells grandfather about 1852. The Patrick Dunlevy place has changed considerably: the house has been weatherboarded, a new barn being built, and the public road changed, but the old barn and numerous other buildings are still the same and now owned...
