Excerpt: . . . The department plans to have the selected contractor prepare a number of Significant Reliance Placed key documents including plans needed to carry out disciplined processes, on Contractors to Define define additional business processes to be standardized, and propose a and Implement the TASC migration approach. However, DHS has not developed the necessary Program contractor oversight mechanisms to ensure that its significant reliance on contractors for the TASC program does not result in an unfavorable outcome. Work with other systems acquisition and implementation efforts have shown that placing too much reliance on contractors can result in systems efforts plagued with serious performance and management problems. For 17 example, DHS Office of Inspector General (OIG) recently reported that the U. S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) had not established adequate controls and effective oversight of contract workers responsible for providing Secure Border Initiative (SBI) program support services. Given the departments aggressive SBI program schedule and shortages of program managers and acquisition specialists, CBP relied on contractors to fill the staffing needs and get the program underway. However, CBP had not clearly distinguished between roles and responsibilities that were appropriate for contractors and those that must be performed by government employees. CBP also had not provided an adequate number of contracting officers technical representatives (COTR) to oversee support services contractors performance. As a result, according to the OIG report, contractors were performing functions that should have been performed by government workers. According to the OIG, this heavy reliance on contractors increased the risk of CBP relinquishing its responsibilities for SBI program decisions to support contractors, while...
