Excerpt: . 277 Kinds of units --iii. 44 cannot exist separately will be stated later.--b. The second of the two kinds is described in the words, 2. that collection in which the different component parts are specified each by a term, as for instance of both kinds, gods-andhuman-beings. Now by the expression gods-and-human-beings², the two parts of the collection which are expressed by the words of both kinds have been specified as being separate. An objection is raised, the expression of both kinds does not bring the difference between the parts of that collection into consciousness. How then can we say that the collection in which the different component parts have been described has received names? The reply is in the words of these two. And it is because of these very parts that the term collection can be imposed. By the words Hof both kinds which describe a thing as having two parts, the idea of the collection is expressed, since a sentence cannot but express the object-intended by the sentence. This is the point. Once more he describes a difference in qualities by saying Furthermore. Both the identity and the distinction are emphasized. He describes the emphasis laid upon the difference in the words, a grove of mango-trees or a gathering of Bralnn;ms. Because the genitive case is prescribed¹ to express a distinction, as for instance, a cow belonging to the Gargas. He describes the emphasis laid upon the identity in the words...
