There is no Neverland. There is no second star to the right, no fairies; In our where and when you are a fairy tale, a story; In our world, every little boy and girl has to grow up. - Princess Kara It had been a full month to the day since Kara and her little sister Caetlin entered the magical chest with their feline companion Twilight. The chest in the attic was a doorway to other times and places, some that exist within our own reality and others that do not. Kara had adorned a magical tiara once owned by a young Persian Princess who lived in Shiraz during the Safavid Dynasty of 1509. Caetlin wore a head band with a pair of faux cat ears which Twilight advised once belonged to him, until he got his new ears when he became guardian of the chest. Excited for a brand new adventure the girls leave early one morning, but something is wrong, the chest won't open and Twilight is stuck on the other side. The Neverland is the 2nd book in the short story adventures of Princess Kara and Caetsie Cats. Perfect for children's bedtime stories or young, advanced readers.
