Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Gladiator: A Tragedy in Five Acts O, Catacombs i O, temple 1 sole asylum Wherein can freely breathe, Man, oppressed by the cruel yoke of Rome That Rome which grows old in bitter Strife and discord; whose spirit, That once kept whole the people, now from Her worn out body dies away. O, Catacombs I Be your gloom redoubled, the fight Begins - the future of the world Is concentrated in one thought, nor doubtful Is the victory. Tyrants and slaves 1 At the great man s feet a people laden With funereal clothes and chains Greens, madness, misery and of three thousand Gods, not a single one for the crisis 1 Behold thy world O Rome! Behold thy heaven! But our god has risen, and sheds the ray Of his light upon his human family. He Whom the entombed spirit makes alive With its breath, for our eyes can make a sun And freedom for the soul. Yes! Christ Our brother, - Christ who was born On straw, in a manger, sprung From the common people - but not therefore less Son to the Omnipotent. In His name We have fought against a century of blows. The prisons are with martyrs filled, The greedy axe gets blunt, in vain Redoubling its strokes. Alas I we die On all sides. O, heaven, when shall be erased From the world s face the scandal.
