Before the war Great Britain and America were commercially asleep. The United States had no merchant marine on the ocean and could neither develop her own trade in manufactured goods nor serve other nations by improving their markets for raw materials. Great Britain had her wonderful empire, but permitted Germany to develop many of its resources through German ships and German scientific production. Germany overreached herself because her philosophy of trade and shipping was wrong--based upon selfish exploitation and one-sided dealing. England and America have both learned their lessons. They are now waking to the possibilities in a new world of international service. He profits most who serves most. One nation...
