Excerpt: .whence fresh air entered the cavern, and held the lantern up for me to see her pet. I stood making friendly advances to the beauty and, to Becky s amazement, he never moved an inch, but wrinkled his nose for sugar. Witch! that is what you are! laughed Becky, as Imp poked his nose under my arm. I have never known him to do such a thing. Imp stood listening to his mistress as if he thoroughly understood the situation. I turned to tell Rebecca what a beauty he was, and he deliberately poked his nose out against my face. After all the supplies were stacked away, Rebecca slipped the halter over Imp s head and led him to a ring cemented in the solid rock. Now, Imp, you will have to be good and not whinny or make a sound. I know what is good for you, and you must do just as I tell you, or a bad Yankee soldier will catch you and then you will see! warned Rebecca, shaking her finger at him. The horse stood looking at her as if striving to understand what that strange word Yankee meant; then he threw up his head and shook it defiantly. We said good-by to Imp and returned to the cart where Tim waited. We sent Tim to the barns with the mule and we went back to the house. That was such a busy day that everyone felt weary and glad when the sun showed its slanting rays over the trees. It must have been about four o clock when sounds of approaching cavalry reached the house. It was the company Newell and...
