A Knowledge Experience Grid is a tool for identifying the learning development needs of individuals and groups. It works by enabling respondents to indicate their knowledge and experience levels against a set of topics relevant to their work area (which you determine). The process identifies any knowledge and experience gaps and indicates how they can be filled by appropriate training or development activities. The KE Grid provides a visual rather than statistical indication of both individual and group learning development needs You get not only an indication of what learning development is needed, but also how the needs can be met most effectively And.it can all fit on one side of A4 paper.
