After all, one does not have to use gun metal for poles, bases, collars, bracket arms, and flexible-suspension brackets because we cannot keep the steel or the cast iron rust free; why, then, should it be necessary for hangers? In the matter of local action, we can assure Mr. Blackburn that we have met with nothing but the exact opposite of his experience, and we even hesitated to exhibit specimens of decayed span wire because we felt that every one would take the action for granted. What prevents it at Bradford Mr....
