Reviews

This is the finest book i have got go through right up until now. I have got read and i also am confident that i am going to planning to read once again yet again in the future. You will not truly feel monotony at at any time of the time (that's what catalogs are for about if you check with me).

Not illustrated. 1897 Excerpt: .for highest; April, twenty for lowest, and fifty-five for highest; May, twentyeight for lowest, and fifty-five for highest; June, twenty-six for lowest, and thirty-seven for highest; July, twenty for lowest, and thirty-three for highest; August, eighteen for lowest, and twenty-eight for highest; September, sixteen for lowest, and twenty-two for highest; October, thirteen for lowest, and twenty-two for highest; November, thirteen for lowest, and twenty-two for highest; December, thirteen for lowest, and twenty-one for highest. These, of course, are pound prices. It will be seen that the lowest quotation is fifteen cents, and that price occurs only in the months of October, November and December. Another point, and one which will strengthen my case, is that during the months from about the middle of February to the middle of September, the prices call for broilers, usually one and a half pounds each, while the rest of the year they are spring chickens, and may weigh two to three pounds, bringing a good price at the lowest quotation. The cost of artificial heat during warm weather also lessens the cost of production. This interview has brought out a number of suggestions, and it may be well to make a few notes and comments. Mr. Jacobs places the cost of feeding up to a marketable size, at five or six cents a pound. Mr. Seely thinks the estimate I gave in my first article, fifteen cents a pound, which includes brooding, about right; but the matter of cost can...
