In this case an assistant teacher is a necessity; but where an assistant cannot be had, the teacher will be compelled to double up such classes as can be so combined with the fewest bad results. The following list includes approximately the recitations which should be heard in an average rural school. It is the maximum of what should be on the program. In many schools the classes will be fewer and the time devoted to each recitation longer. Reading. First reader, four recitations daily. Second reader, three recitations daily. Third reader, two recitations daily. Fourth and fifth readers, one recitation each, daily. Spelling. Two or three classes, one recitation each, daily. In the lower classes spelling will be in connection with the reading lesson. Writing. One general exercise daily. Require all to take part. Arithmetic. Four classes, one recitation each, daily.
