Excerpt from Cotton Cultivation in China, and Something About the Spinning and Weaving Mills: Being a Reprint of a Series of Articles That Appeared in the North-China Daily News (Shanghai) In September and October, 1916, Revised and Brought Down to Date Yet Shane-i cotton, which ranks as China s finest, is produced from American seed introduced by missionaries a few years ago, but even there, where it seems evident that the soil and climate are better suitable for the American plant than other districts, in three years the American cotton becomes almost identical with that grown from native seed. But, of course, no scientific attention is given to the crop. Kiangchow is the natural and financial centre of a very extensive cotton-growing district in Shansi, and in 1898 capital to the extent of some Tls. Or more was raised by the local Shansi officials, a fine site by the side of the Fen river was secured and buildings, chimney stack, etc., were erected. By the time of the Boxer rising part of the machinery was already on the ground and the buildings were...
