Fragrant Harbours - Distant Rivers (Paperback)

By T John Downes

CFZ Press, United Kingdom, 2005. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Pre-Colonial Africa: The late 19th Century History as Soap Opera
DAVID: the sensitive young Scottish crofter s son who dreamed of a being a missionary. HENRY: an illegitimate Welsh boy who lied about his background, nationality and even his name to fulfil his lust for glory. FREDDIE: after a disastrous love affair, he enlists in the most dangerous job he can in a vain attempt to get himself killed. KARL: the drug dealer who peddled religion and opium with equal gusto. FLORA: the feminist who married a crusty old army officer These read like cast members in a contemporary TV drama, but they are very real historical characters. This remarkable book shows how the lives of these - and other - characters intertwined across the historical events of late-nineteenth century Africa, shaping the face of the continent we know today. For the first time, the links between the Chinese Opium Wars and the scramble for Africa are explored, and the author shows how Religion, Drugs, Commerce, and individual ambition were as important as Colonial Policy in the soap opera of state.
