Excerpt: . . . 7 For the most part, the militarys answer to encroachment chal-lenges has been to work around the immediate problems while at-tempting to minimize the impact on the quality and quantity of training but the cumulative impact of this stop gap approach is not being addressed. The previous administration studied these issues but made no real proposals for long term solutions. These problems are affecting the ability of our forces to fight and this administra-tion needs to tackle this problem before it gets out of control. We will be reporting what is said at this hearing to the President and the administration to make sure they are aware of all the con-cerns of the people who are in the military who are leading our fighting forces. In 1999 at the Citadel, President Bush said, The military must improve the quality of training. Shortfalls on the proving ground become disasters on the battlefield. The people sitting before us today do not need to be told that, so today we invite the Army, the Navy, the Marines and the Air Force to describe the unique en-croachment challenges facing each service. I will ask them to dis-cuss the operational difficulties faced by those whose job it is to make American soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines ready for war. Just like professionals everywhere, the members of our Armed Services need to continually practice their skills in the most realis-tic settings. They are the heart of this hearing. We...
