A woodcut of the latter variety is given in Hone s Every-day Book, vol. i. p. 84. Another has the arms of Great Britain on the obverse, instead of a portrait. A description by Mr. Haggard of all the varieties will be found in the Num. Chron. vol. iii., p. 149. J. E. VIII. COINS OF ALEXANDERS SUCCESSORS IN THE EAST. (Continued from p. 186.) Monograms. The monograms on the coins of Greece and Western Asia are of comparatively little importance, as each city is generally distinguished by its particular symbol, and the history of those countries is sufficiently well known from ancient authors. For the West, therefore, the coins are only aids to history; but for the East, from the want of written records, they are history itself. So also from the entire absence of symbols on the Eastern coins, the monograms become one of our chief authorities for the determination of the particular localities over which the different rulers held sway. The find-spots of the coins themselves are likewise specially valuable for the same purpose; but, unfortunately, they are not always known; and in the case of single silver coins which may have been carried from place to place by traders, such data might even perhaps mislead us. But although the actual findspots of the rarer specimens may be neither traceable nor trustworthy, yet we know that...
