Excerpt from Information on Waterfowl Protection Program at Kesterson Reservoir Kesterson Reservoir consists of 12 shallow ponds with a total water-surface area of about acres and an average depth of about 4 feet. The Bureau designed it to regulate flows in the San Luis Drain, a canal that was originally planned to discharge to the western Delta at Suisun Bay. The partially completed drain ends at Kesterson Reservoir, which the Bureau is using to store and evaporate agricultural drainage water from about acres near Mendota. Kesterson Reservoir is just east of Gustine at the northern end of an area commonly known as the grasslands. The grasslands are mainly marsh and pasture lands in the flood plain of the San Joaquin River and provide important wintering habitat for waterfowl on the Pacific flyway. The San Joaquin River divides the lands into the east grasslands, which covers about acres, and the west grasslands, which includes about acres.
