Most times the pastor is not aware of the pressure because he has lived under it for so long. But, it is there. He may mark a day on the calendar as his day off, but one phone call and he is at the hospital, or at the home of a hurting person. He may plan a vacation with his family and is far away from home, but again, one phone call can cancel the plans as they rush back home because of a death in the church s family. In retirement, that pressure goes away and for that the pastor can be thankful. However, there is another pressure that takes its place. That pressure is described in the scriptures as being a fire in the bones. It is the desire to preach.
