Columbine Press, 1988. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. One can well imagine ghosts when gazing at the crumbling, abandoned houses scattered around this high mountain mining town. Yet there are more and more reports from current residents of lingering spirits in their well kept, modern homes. Youg Mary no longer feels alone and frightened as a rock and roll teenager and recognizes her and welcomes her into the 21st Century. An artist and his dog are happy enough to know a gray haired, aproned grandma has come back to her rocking chair to watch over them. Ruth, who has turned her Victorian home into a bed breakfast inn, is constantly surprised when a cheerful entity insists on being a part of all that goes on in the house where she was once a bride. Their stories, and more, are presented here for your enjoyment, a touch of history and a better understanding of those who have gone on before. Every story is based on personal interviews with today s occupants, passing on their experiences in great detail and pride in knowing they share their homes and hearts with a ghost.
