DIVORCE WASN T ENOUGH FOR THESE WOMEN, THEY WANTED MURDER IN THIS TRUE CRIME ANTHOLOGY Gaile Owens Gaile Owens was not a very good murderer. In fact, few people could have made a worse job of hiring a killer to dispose of their abusive husband. She may have ended years of violence - physical and sexual but Owens, though, would pay a huge price for her inability to plan an undiscovered crime - a death sentence, a quarter of a century in prison and estrangement from her children. Mary Winkler Mary Winkler, at first appearances, would seem to be an altogether normal woman. So too did her family, with a husband who was a Church minister and three young children, girls aged just eight, six and one. But in 2006, Mary sparked a border-crossing manhunt, and a court case followed nationwide. She had killed her husband with a shot to the back from the family s shotgun. What followed was a gripping and bizarre court case which gripped the attention of the nation. Tracey Grissom Claiming to be a victim of rape and other abuses, a distraught Tracey Grissom would travel to her ex-husband Hunter s workplace and shoot him six times in the back, receiving a twenty-five-year life sentence for his murder. Her defense attorney would argue that Tracey was motivated by post-traumatic stress disorder caused by her Hunter s constant abuse and sexual assaults. One jury member had even asked the judge to be lenient in her sentencing as they were not allowed to hear details of her Hunter s alleged abuses (beatings, rape, sodomy). But what really happened in the years that led up to May 15th, 2012?...
