Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . People in their 50s and older, believe that the best years of their lives have already been lived. Not so, for Lenore Burns, her twin brother, and their closest friends. Their successful lives, which they were happy enough with, were shaken out of complacency by a series of shocking revelations, mental disorders, and struggles to find their true purposes in life. Set in Buffalo, New York, a real city going through a renaissance after 50 years of decline, the characters in this fictional story, find their own rebirth, through struggles between withdrawing from new challenges or finding inner strength to face them, head-on. No matter what their backgrounds as youths, the people in this novel have chosen different paths, arriving at an age in their lives where their choices still matter in making them happy, fulfilled seniors, or failures at living useful lives. The author has used real settings in Buffalo, as well as fictional places as backgrounds against which the characters cope with their own re-births while past secrets are revealed, and emotional landscapes are dramatically changed. There are people whose bodies age, but whose minds and feelings remain vital and in need of others to continually find new challenges. Life of the spirit never ages, and these characters prove just that. Troubled families going through the ravages of alcoholism, mental illness, personal loss, and youthful indiscretions are nothing new. This novel shows that with the help of each other, fall-out can be contained. It also shows that even with financial security, great schooling, successful careers, and plenty of support, some people still cannot make it unscathed through life's journey. Since everyone and everything is connected, the actions and...
