Gliding down the steps, and turning round a rosebush into the secluded part of the garden where he stands, Diana runs to him unseen, holds out her two hands towards his, and puts her cheek up prettily for a kiss. The soldier looks at her an instant, crushing her tiny fingers in his palm, and then, with quickening light in his grey eyes, bends to her cheek, and kisses her with the words--My child! Years are blotted out, and they are friends again; he strong and fatherly, she sweet and grateful; as they were to each other in the first weeks at Niagara Falls, before that cruel war broke out, and parted them for these weary years. I am so glad to see you, Uncle John, and in my husbands house! Leonard will be as proud to give you welcome as myself. You'll stay with...
