Excerpt from Letters Relating to the Mission of Sir Thomas Roe to Gustavus Adolphus: 1629 30 To ordinary minds the winter of 1628-9 would have appeared a most unsuitable time for any warlike designs on the part of the King of England. The surrender of Rochelle in the previous autumn had been the crowning disaster of a long series of failures, and the domestic troubles had risen to such a height that no prudent man would have run the risk of entering upon diplomatic action which might possibly draw him into a war, which, in default of supplies from Parliament, could only end in disgrace and failure. But Charles had at least one quality in common with the nation over which he ruled. He never knew when he was beaten, and we find him in the years which followed the assassination of Buckingham as ready to interfere on the Continent diplomatically as he had been ready to interfere by force of arms whilst his favourite minister was alive. In this course of action he had by his side till February 1632 the new...
