Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . AS WOMEN, maternal instinct runs deep in some of us. I say some of us because, like any human trait, its presence or absence can vary to a great degree. I suppose it could be said that variation from the norm is the norm. I had no maternal instinct as a child and young adult. I hated dolls, didn t like playing house, I was a Sandlot kind of girl, hanging with the boys instead of babysitting, ripping the knees out of countless pairs of pants, hair a wild tangle, more likely to have dirt than makeup on my face. But then one day in 1992 someone put a baby in my arms. Not any baby. MY baby. And, Boom! There it was. A sudden and sweet and nurturing love and protectiveness. Mama Bear was born. It surprised no one more than me. For what it s worth, I m still more likely to have dirt than makeup on my face.This month s stories all rely strongly on some aspect or another of maternal instinct. First up, Green on the Inside by Star Spider--a haunting little piece of magical realism and a mother s regret.Next, from Lora Gray, Nuclear Daughter, in which the strain of post-nuclear devastation and the strength of the maternal instinct meet.Chloe Clark s So This is a powerful literary story of longing and loss and healing. Lastly, our recycled story of the month, Birthday Child, by FFO multi-published author, Caroline M. Yoachim, a fascinating look at a near-future world of infertility and pre-fab babies. Plus a new FXXK WRITING article by Jason S. Ridler.
