Reviews

This book is definitely not straightforward to get started on studying but extremely exciting to read. It is really simplistic but shocks in the 50 percent of the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

THE MODELING OF ACOUSTIC FLUIDIC SENSORS USING SPECTRAL METHODS

Trauner Verlag Feb 2014, 2014. Buch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - In this work, the modeling of vibrating liquid sensors which are suitable to measure mass density and shear viscosity is presented. The considered sensor types comprise flexural vibrating diaphragm cell sensors and piezoelectric disc sensors using lateral field excitation. For both types, semi-numerical models are presented, which are based on temporal and spatial Fourier transforms of the governing partial differential equations. Compared to the original problems, the complexity of the thus formulated models is reduced considerably. With these models the frequency responses of the sensors are determined and the fluid parameters are related to the resonant parameters. In addition to the modeling of these two sensors the concept of acoustic impedance matrices is discussed. These matrices represent generalized acoustic transmission line models for wave propagation in multilayered elastic and electroacoustic structures. 168 pp. Englisch.
