Univ Europeenne, United States, 2011. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: French . Brand New Book. L objectif de ce livre est de demontrer que le marche du travail tunisien n est plus un espace homogene au sens de la theorie neoclassique standard. Au contraire, il est segmente en divers secteurs a modes de fonctionnement differents. La division du marche du travail repose le plus souvent sur des differences de nature d emplois plutot que sur des differences de productivite. En Tunisie, et comme dans la majorite des pays en developpement, la segmentation du marche du travail est associee, en grande partie, a des facteurs institutionnels qui empechent le marche de fonctionner de facon adequate. Les distorsions et les inegalites salariales sont generalement imputees aux interventions de l Etat et au pouvoir monopolistique des syndicats. Dans la mesure ou il n est plus aise d estimer l influence des institutions du travail sur le dualisme salarial, nous utilisons une methode de classification ex-post (a posteriori) afin d identifier les segments homogenes des travailleurs et etudier ensuite leurs caracteristiques.
