Excerpt: . . . that, industriously as they were persevered in for near three hours, -Clarentine could not fail to observe them, The--only affect, however, they had upon her mind was that of leading her sincerely to compassionate her mother--a mother W510, unentertaining and uncultivated as she might be, it was still evident--possessed many qualities that renderfldt her deserving of a better daughter. THREE days had now elapsed since the departure of Mr. Lenham; and Clarentine, though in that time she had hourly gained ground in the good opinion of Mrs. Barclay, began most impatiently to long for his return, when the following letter from--him was brought to her: Inss DELMINGTON. . Somerset Hall, July 26th. My dear young Friend, -- The intelligence I have to announce to you it was my wish to communicate in person, but the probable delays that will protract my-return are so numerous, that I cannot any longer,...
