An increase in height would certainly not diminish CO the consumption, already very low. 9 The only possible economy is that which would result from the use of higher temperature of blast. If now I am asked whence arises this great difference between the working of the French furnaces here named and those of the older types of Cleveland, I can only suggest the following reasons: --1. The section of the French furnaces is generally more tapering than that of English furnaces. Hence there is a better distribution of the gases; the reduction goes on in the upper regions with a less combustion of solid carbon. It has been already remarked that it is to this difference in section, in shape, that part of the economy of the furnace of Clarence 1866, compared to Ormesby 1867, and Clarence 1853, is to be attributed. 2.
