About The Book MAURUS JOKAI Timars Two Worlds Maurus Jokai, by common consent the greatest Hungarian novelist of the nineteenth century, was born at Komarom on February 19, 1825. Trained for the law, as an advocate he achieved the distinction of winning his first case. The drudgery of a lawyers office, however, proved uncongenial to him, and fired by the success of his first play, The Jew Boy (Zsid fiu), he went to Pest, where he devoted himself to journalism, in due course becoming editor of Eletkpek, a leading Hungarian literary periodical. At the outbreak of the Revolution of 1848, he threw himself in with the supporters of the national cause. From that time until his death--which occurred on May 4, 1904--Jokai identified himself considerably...
