In his famous triangular theory of love, psychologist Robert Sternberg identifies the three key ingredients that make things happen. -Passion -Intimacy -Commitment His theory explains how these three elements should be present to experience a consummate love. Starting a business follows the same logic. At its root, there is an entrepreneur: you. And you need the same three ingredients to thrive. -Passion: To have a strong feeling of enthusiasm. -Intimacy: To feel close and attached to it. -Commitment: To stick to it, to work hard and be loyal. An entrepreneur s power depends on the absolute strength of these three components, and the success of a cofounding team, exactly like that of a couple in love, depends on their strengths relative to each other. [...] Let s have a look at Sternberg s types of love, remixed into Tabarnapp s types of entrepreneurs. -Wannabe: He s close to his startup but lacks passion and commitment (except maybe the passion for getting rich and commitment to procrastination). -Crush: He has a crush for an idea and feels passionate about it but has no intimacy with or commitment to it. Over time, he vanishes without leaving an impression. -Empty: He s committed without any intimacy or passion. He s like a person...
