John Wiley Sons Inc, United States, 1999. Paperback. Condition: New. Volume 1 ed.. Language: English . Brand New Book. Anyone with a serious interest in the future of education will find this book provocative, prescient, prescriptive, and pivotal. It is a must-read for those responsible for preparing educational institutions at all levels for their new role in our networked society. - Vinton G. Cerf, senior vice president, MCI WORLDCOM, and chairman, Internet Society Transformative. That s what networks are; that s the role our institutions must fill for society; and that s what our leadership must be. This book provides valuable insight into networks and the challenges we must address to ensure that higher education thrives in the Knowledge Age. - Molly Corbett Broad, president, University of North Carolina This book will prove essential to presidents and other campus leaders who must plan for, and invest in, the networking infrastructures that will powerfully impact the futures of our institutions. - John Hitt, president, University of Central Florida All of educational practice will eventually contribute to the creative and fast-paced links that we know through the Internet. The thoughtful essays in this volume can, indeed, help us prepare for that future. - Jane Margaret Maggie O Brien, president, St. Mary s College of Maryland This first volume from the EDUCAUSE Leadership Strategies series examines the changes and challenges that the advanced Internet2 will bring to higher education campuses everywhere. Edited by Mark Luker and featuring the insights of experienced campus leaders and information professionals, this forward-thinking guide provides a roadmap to the extraordinary capabilities of the advanced Internet to come. The contributors reveal how this new networking environment will affect business operations, academic instruction, libraries, information management, regional partnerships, federal funding, policy decisions, and more. Each chapter offers specific recommendations and...
