Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from A Preliminary Study in Corrective Speech This study presents in a practical manner a brief analysis of some common speech defects among young children, with remedial suggestions in the form of special exercises. A more detailed account of consecutive work with two stutterers shows the significance of nutrition, orthodontic treatment, environment, mental attitude, intellectual status and systematic training. No attempt has been made to give an anatomical description of the speech organs or an exhaustive treatment of the causes of speech defects. The selected references are limited to those bearing directly on the practical problems of corrective speech. This monograph is a portion of a dissertation presented by the writer in partial fulfillment of requirements for the degree of Master of Arts in child welfare. Miss Stinchfield's work has been made possible through the cooperation of the divisions of the Research Station, the Department of Psychology, the Colleges of Medicine, Dentistry and Education, and the Department of Public Speaking.
