CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 384 pages. Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.0in. x 1.0in. It is May 2010, at the height of the financial crisis. While most of Great Britain descends into poverty, life in the Westminster Bubble is getting interesting. The unelected and unpopular Prime Minister, known with a gleeful sense of irony as The Great Brain, is trying to wriggle out of a general election by forcing a Prolongation of Parliament bill through the House. Everybody is in uproar. On the day of the crucial vote, thousands of people line the South Bank. Parliament Square is packed to capacity. Riot police are out in force. For many the day couldn't get any better. Here are the great British people, united in protest, hungry for change. Until, falling out of the sky comes the most unlikely of catalysts: a meteor, just big enough to slam into Westminster Palace and obliterate Parliament, along with every MP in the country. It is an unprecedented way for a nation to lose its political class, and a disaster on an epic scale. Or is it? Losing all our politicians might not be such a bad thing. It...
