In the cases in which death occurred there were only slight respiratory movements, and the heart showed evidence of inhibition until shortly before it failed completely. Of course, it is impossible to state definitely that death was due to the inhibition of the heart, but under light etherization the cardiac factor seemed to be the most important. I have also failed to kill animals by direct stimulation of the inhibitory fibers to the heart. In Dr. Meltzer's consideration of shock, in which he spoke about the different factors, he fulfils quite well my idea of the general subject of shock, but he is speaking from a philosophic standpoint, viewing the problem as a whole. I am attempting to divide the different possible conditions which a surgeon calls shock. For this reason, part of my discussion does not come directly under the subject of shock. I have never seen a condition of low blood pressure produced in an animal due to excitation. I do not say, however, that it has not occurred in man. I have never been able to produce it. In regard to the production of shock I have been more fortunate than Dr. Meltzer, in that a large number of my animals did produce the functional signs which he has stated is necessary to fulfil the clinical conditions for shock. Replying to Dr. Herb, I wish to emphasize the fact she mentioned, namely, that these cases in...
