Phoenix Yard Books, United Kingdom, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Stella Dreis (illustrator). Language: English . Brand New Book. At the end of the village, behind a green door, Lived happy Miss Jolly, with Melvin her boar. Each morning she d sit in her tree playing a song, On her cello, while Melvin sang sweetly along.A cauliflower hat, a fish bonnet, a few large animals, a flying boar called Melvin and a whole lot of watermelons. To the villagers who watch her going about her day, it is clear that Miss Jolly is irritatingly happy. Her never-ending cheerfulness leaves three of her neighbours highly confused and jealous, driving them to ridiculous and hilarious measures in an attempt to compete with Miss Jolly in the happiness - and headgear - stakes. Beautiful and insane in equal measure, this wacky book follows three local busybodies on their journey to discover the secret of true happiness. The illustrations are striking for their humour, colourfulness and bizarreness all rolled into one. Oh, and the watermelons rhyme.- REVIEWS - This is a brilliantly funny picture book to share with any toddler.Parent and child are sure to laugh through it as you meet three rather miserable ladies who live in a completely mad world but by the end of the story they ve realised that happiness is a much better way to live! -- LOVE READING FOR KIDS With colourful illustrations and a funny storyline this tale is great at capturing how nosy neighbours really can be. Full of creative imagination this is an inspiring story to be loved by all, particularly those who have a love for watermelons! -- BOOKTRUST A fun, quirky book about what makes us feel happy or sad. -- JUNIOR MAGAZINE All sorts of things abound in this completely wacky picture book...
