A Different Physics (Paperback)

By Lisa Rosenberg

Red Mountain Press, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Poetry. California Studies. From thistles and fossils, to the inner workings of spacecraft, the poems in A DIFFERENT PHYSICS move through natural and figurative landscapes, to worlds of cultural and intellectual models. A slide rule carries us from grief back to innocence. A silicon wafer for computer chips reflects sexual politics and art history. In the central sequence, Flight, we travel the cloaked realm of the military-industrial complex, where personal and national mythologies collide within varied poetic forms. Places, objects, and ideas launch explorations through imagistic, musical language that examines our modes of industry and inquiry, and the very things--and lives--we have built. These poems of curiosity, cynicism, reverence, and transformation invite us to consider the forces that shape our thoughts as well as our lives, and possible paths toward remaking both. In A DIFFERENT PHYSICS Lisa Rosenberg achieves attention as an action of mind and a spiritual attainment. These poems give the reader alert, informed attention to the natural world of plants and creatures--and also to the demanding world of particles, clean rooms and precision engineering. Moreover, A DIFFERENT PHYSICS unifies those realms, with an informed...
