World Scientific Publishing Co Pte Ltd, Singapore, 2010. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. The Nobel Prizes in natural sciences have developed to become a unique measure of scientific excellence. Using archival documents, which have been released (50 years secrecy) for scholarly work, the author expertly traces the strengths and weaknesses of the Nobel system as exemplified by individual prizes. Surveys of the more than 100 years that the Prizes have been awarded are also presented. This book discusses the most important prize in the world of science and gives unique historical insights into how the laureate selection process has developed to secure optimal choice. No other book has been published which draws from previously classified archival materials to the extent that this book does. It indirectly deals with factors that foster scientific discoveries viz. the role of both individuals and institutions and thus provides invaluable insights for researchers, institutions and anyone interested in science. figure-remove --> Alfred Nobel at the age of about 30 years. The process of selection of Nobel Prize recipients is initiated as early as May-September the preceding year by listing the persons to be invited to nominate candidates. During the year when the prizes are awarded there are three particularly critical dates (weeks); January 31 - the last day of nomination; the first full week in October - announcement of the prize recipients in different fields on different days; and December 10 (Alfred Nobel's death day) - prize award ceremonies in Stockholm and Oslo.
