Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Frazier-Lemke Act: Its Impact on Farmers and Lenders in the Northern Great Plains Most of the farmers who petitioned under section 75 of the act were in need of debt adjustment. In 82 percent of the cases debtors had an excess of liabilities over assets and could not meet their obligations, even by selling all their property. Foreclosure was threatened or in progress in most instances. The heavy financial burdens, especially the fixed costs for interest and taxes, were out of line with farm earnings. The direct use of section 75 was not numerically significant. Only in North Dakota, California, and Texas did the number of petitions exceed between 1937 and 1949. In North Dakota, the large-scale publicity and the educational campaigns carried on probably caused the petitions to reach this number. This would indicate that legislation for the benefit of farmers which involves relatively complicated legal machinery must be accompanied by adequate educational programs to assure its proper use.
