The compulsory principle was almost unanimously accepted from the first, probably because of the Prussian and alleged American examples. The old quibble, that education if compulsory must be free, next did service. Then, it having been assumed that the State must be teacher, it became manifest that the different groups who opposed the Bill, not being agreed among themselves, were utterly unprepared to answer the question, which particular religion is to be taught The only logical solution was, no religious teaching at all. The Bill passed triumphantly through committee on the 19th October, and came into force on the 1st January, 1873. Zealous Roman Catholics at once rejected the new Act. They refused to accept State aid on the official terms, and went out into the wilderness. 5 And there they are still. But they set to work to...
