

Trauma, Addiction, and Trauma: Portraying the Cycle of Suffering in Addiction

By Amir Pirani

ContentoNow. Paperback. Condition: New. 388 pages. Dimensions: 9.6in. x 6.7in. x 0.9in. Through the years, substance addiction has become a strategic issue. Most violence-related penalties constitute a consequence of drugs and alcohol addiction, including a significant part of the property crimes. This book portrays the problems roots. Approximately forty percent of those addicted to hard substances, who come to Rothschild Two, successfully withdraw from substances. This saves the police and courts work on tens of thousands of files, but even more so, spares a great deal of suffering for the substance addicts, their families, and the public as a whole. The key to this therapeutic success lies within the implementation of innovative models for helping addiction victims and aiding in their rehabilitation. The core of the model is identifying their cycle of suffering which has guided their lives for years. The author explains and demonstrates the relationship of past personal trauma among substance addicts and their subsequent substance addiction. Amir Pirani, born in 1959 in Kibbutz Nir David is married and father to three daughters. Amir has lived in Tel Aviv for the past two decades. He founded and manages the Rothschild Two therapeutic center, a part of the Social Services...
