Using ASD for traditional employee services was also common among the selected agencies. Many of them used ASD for their employee assistance programs, wellness and fitness centers, health units, or drug and alcohol testing, often using interagency services to provide these functions. By going to outside providers for these specialized services, agency officials believed that they were able to focus more on core activities in addition to gaining efficiencies by joining other agencies efforts. A DOE official, for example, said that the department used ASD for its fitness centers to avoid liability issues so that, for example, if an employee were injured using the center it would not be the responsibility of the department. DOE also reported joining another departments large contract for drug and alcohol testing to reduce its workload by not having to commit resources to contracting for the service itself. Officials also said they gained the benefit of...
