Excerpt from Gulf and Glacier: Or the Percivals in Alaska It has been well said that a railway station is a fit emblem Of human life, with its brief merriment and grief, its greetings and good-bys, its clamor Of coming and going. Be this as it may, it is probable that Of the half a thousand people in the Lowell Depot that morning, but few abandoned themselves to moral reflections. Certainly Tom Percival was not occupied with philosophical meditation, as he stood on the lowest step of the car Kamloops, looking out eagerly over the crowd that surged to and fro on the platform beside the train.
