Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Church in Northern Ohio and in the Diocese of Cleveland: From 1749 to 1890 On entering a large city the eye is filled with the evidences of the material struggle for life - some of them grand, some of them dismal. One cannot but reflect on that incessant activity which has upreared the vast mart. And yet, above all the massive or elegant structures that symbolize the various successes, pursuits and ambitions of man, there towers the cross of the Catholic church. Passing out into the country, in the more modest village, and amid surroundings nearer to the God of nature, still we find the upreared shaft, reminder of mankind's redemption. These temples, lowly or superb, are the evidences of the civilization that builds beyond time, and yet preserves all that is worth preserving in time. But the temples are not self-upreared, and back of this the civilization on which depends the security of the temporal, there have been architects and builders at work - their master, the Supreme Architect of the universe,...
