Wipf Stock Publishers, United States, 2011. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Description: In Giving Voice to the Silent Pulpit, author Barry Blood explores the many differences that exist between Popular Christianity, (the doctrine as taught from the pulpit) and Academic Christianity, (the doctrine as taught in our colleges and seminaries). He contends these are startling differences that may shock the average Christian layperson. The author reveals how these differences have created an intellectual gap between the church and our present day worldview of reality, a gap which has contributed to the decline in Christian membership rolls worldwide. He contends that exposing these known doctrinal differences will create a more intellectually honest Christianity, and-he believes-will build a church that can be a more engaging choice for the educated populace of the twenty-first century. About the Contributor(s): Barry E. Blood, Sr. is a retired Aerospace manager and lay minister, with a passion for the study of religion in general and Christianity in particular. He is the author of Christian Dogma-The Twenty-first-century Perspective (2004).
