We re almost there now, said Alec Sands as he steered the big touring car around a curve in the road and out upon a long stretch of hard, smooth, well-oiled clay. Unless I m mistaken, that white church spire over there beyond the fringe of palm trees marks the end of our journey. I really didn t know it was going to be such a long run, or I d have told Bronson to send some lunch with us. Wish you had! Chester Brownell exclaimed, leaning back in his seat in the tonneau. I m almost starved! I reckon we can make up for it to-night, added Billy Worth, who sat in front beside Alec. This Santario is quite a place, isn t it, Alec? I think so, answered young Sands. From what I ve heard, I guess it s a sizable town now, though only a few years ago it was a mere village inhabited by fishermen. Someone discovered that the soil two miles inland from the village was suited for raising oranges, so he...
