Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: Springer, Berlin | Here is an up-to-date examination of recent developments in 3D imaging, as well as coverage of the prospects and challenges facing 3D moving picture systems and devices, including binocular, multi-view, holographic, and image reproduction techniques. | The history of visual media is characterized by drawing, painting, photo, stereoscope, TV and displays, Holography, and HDTV. Three-dimensional (3-D) imaging, visualization, and display technology is the next phase in this historical development. There is no doubt that 3-D TV and 3-D displays are the visual media that will succeed HDTV in near future. The evolutionary merging of communication and broadcast technologies will be enhanced by 3-D visualization, including multimedia communication centers which can respond to all the services and functions provided by the future communication systems. Comparison of a scene presented by 2-D and 3-D images reveals that the 3-D image provides much more pleasing and realistic information than its 2-D version. The benefits provided by 3-D images result from the depth information they preserve. Depth gives viewers the feeling of being in the place where the 3-D image is captured (i.e., immersive feeling) and the feeling of being present (presence feeling). Depth increases efficiencies in remote site operations, such as remote medical and tele-operations, by making viewers perceive the scene as more real from within their living environments. The accuracy and the presence feeling are the main motives of demands for 3-D images in the areas of communication, broadcasting, entertainment, medical operations, virtual world presentations, advertisement, training, education (education + entertainment), telemarketing, tele-presence, tele-conference, visualization of experimental results, and so on. | Part 1: Stereoscopic, multi-view.- Naturalness and presence on stereoscopic image.- Repeated Vergence Adaptation Causes the Decline of Visual Functions in Watching Stereoscopic Television.- Large LED screen television system without eyewear.- Depth resolution and displayable depth of a scene in 3D images.- Part 2: Multi-view, integral imaging.- Flat-panel autostereoscopic view-sequential 3D display backlight.- High-density Directional Display for Generating Natural Three-dimensional Images.- Integral imaging with high depth of field.- Real-time integral imaging using high resolution video system with 8 million pixels.- Part 3: Holographic imaging.- Generation of holograms using integral photography.-...
