Not illustrated. 1922 Excerpt: .part of the questionnaire should furnish the business man s estimate of current educational facilities. Answers to this section should give certain prevalent opinions, which in the aggregate, will be of value in estimating the effectiveness of the training offered. They should bring out the weaknesses of the commercial work and should help to establish new courses, or point out necessary readjustments in the current courses. Thus the study of the development and organization of business estimates the activities of the specific locality in the light of the broader business tendencies of which they are a part; it defines the extent of current organization and development of the local enterprises; it determines the standards of procedure and the needs of business. These data will afford one group of factors to be considered in establishing the range of the commercial course, the content of the subjects, the organization of the curricula, the establishment and organization of parttime and continuation classes, as well as aid in motivating class-room work, and in bringing about effective vocational guidance, placement, and follow-up work. The Commercial Personnel Of A Community The Cleveland survey1 through an analysis of the commercial positions points out that there are certain opportunities in commercial lines and that classes should be organized to train for them, as though immediate definite training to supply these needs followed as a matter of course. The supposition is that the data obtained from a systematic investigation of the commercial occupations of a...
