

Getting by in Hard Times: Gendered Labour at Home and on the Job

By Meg Luxton, June Corman

University of Toronto Press. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Getting by in Hard Times: Gendered Labour at Home and on the Job, Meg Luxton, June Corman, Getting By in Hard Times describes the experiences of daily life for predominantly white, working class women and men during the period of .economic restructuring. begun in the 1980s. Luxton and Corman show how the shift from a pattern where women were full-time housewives and men were income earners, to one where women are increasingly income earners as well, is altering the experience of everyday life Based on a case study conducted from 1980 to 1996, of households where one person was employed at Stelco's manufacturing plant in Hamilton, Ontario, the book examines how working class families make a living by combining paid employment and unpaid domestic labour. During this period of government cutbacks the loss of secure employment for men (as the steel plant cut its labour force by about two-thirds), combined with women's increasing participation in the labour force, resulted in lower standards of living, reduced income, and the imposition of more unpaid work on family households. Getting By in Hard Times examines how growing insecurities undermined class politics while increasing...

READ ONLINE
[9.41 MB]

Reviews

Extremely helpful to any or all category of individuals. It really is rally fascinating throgh studying time period. I am just quickly could possibly get a pleasure of reading a composed ebook.

-- Lawrence Keeling

This publication may be worthy of a read through, and a lot better than other. It is among the most incredible book we have read through. Your daily life period will be change when you total reading this article publication.

-- Garrett Baumbach