Excerpt from Report of the President of Bowdoin College for the Academic Year 1903-1904: To Which Is Appended the Report of the Librarian A course. Of study is never complete or final. Improvements will have to be made in each year to come as they have been made in each year in the past. Still the bringing of the elective principle to cover almost the entire course, and the introduction of a required consecutiveness in at least two of the subjects chosen, make the present year a turning point in the development of the course of study in the college.
